TEACHERS ARE SELECTED FOR '26-'27 TERM

Miss Cope And Miss Smith Leave; Grayson Peters Rejects Board's Offer.

With acceptances received from teachers who are applicants for their present positions in Gettysburg's public schools, the school board today made public the list of instructors.

Two teachers were not applicants for their present positions, and one of the instructors, elected by the board a week ago, has declined the position offered him. Miss Helen L. Cope, teacher of English in the Gettysburg High School for many years, and a former principal at the high school, was not an applicant for re-election.

Under the provisions of state school laws, Miss Cope may retire under pension. Aside from her ability as a teacher, Miss Cope was the capable director of many high school plays.

Miss Anna M. Smith, supervisor of music, was the other teacher who was not an applicant for her position. The board members were not informed what Miss Smith plans to do.

Grayson Peters, principal of the Abbottstown High School, who was elected to the newly-created position of physical director at the local high school, has informed the board that he will not accept the offer. He intends to remain at Abbottstown.

New Music Teacher
In Miss Smith's place as supervisor of music, the board has elected Miss Glee Baker, who is serving her third year as music teacher at Boyne City, Michigan. Miss Baker comes to Gettysburg highly recommended, and with considerable training as a teacher of music.

Miss Cope's place has not yet been filled, nor has the vacancy caused by Mr. Peters' rejection of the board's offer to become physical director. It also is likely that an additional teacher will have to be elected at the high school.

Mrs. Myrna S. Kelly, White Haven, has been elected physical director for the girls in the high school, and it is also expected that she will teach one or two subjects.

Other high school teachers were re-elected as follows:
Miss Anna M. Hake, Guile W. Leffever, J. Guy Wolfe, Miss Ruth A. Spangler, Miss Anna M. Bream, Miss Anna A. McIlhenny, Fred P. Haehnel and James F. Slaybaugh.

Transfer Grades
With the opening of the new high school building in the fall, Seventh and Eighth grades, at present at the Meade building, will be transferred to the present high school building. Miss Elizabeth B. Rummel will be principal of the two grades, with Miss Carrie E. Miller and Paul R. Mehning as teachers. Another teacher will be elected for the instruction of children attending the Seventh and Eighth grades, the board has announced.

At the Meade building, Ray Shetter, a new teacher, will be principal and teacher of the Fifth grade. Miss Nellie Keller, another new instructor, will have charge of the Third grade. Other teachers re-elected at the Meade school are Miss Anna H. Major, Miss Helen G. Culp, Miss Verna M. Waybright and Miss Bess K. Raffensperger.

Present teachers at the High street building were re-elected. They are Lloyd R. Hartman, Miss Maud G. Miller, Mrs. Margaret Gibson, Mrs. Sara R. Clare, Miss A. Grace Sachs, Miss Margaret C. Howard and Miss Alice A. Miller.

HEALTH BEER IS GRANTED BY U. S.

Will be 3.75 Per Cent Strong and Will be Available at Drug Stores For Six Months.

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, March 30.—Medicinal beer comparable in alcoholic content to the pre-prohibition beverage will be accessible to the public for the next six months at least.

The new "health booster" which Annheuser-Busch, of St. Louis, and the Pabst Brewing of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, have been given permission to manufacture is expected to be on sale to the public at drug stores.

The only restriction on the sale of the new malt tonic will be the number of cases drug stores may handle. The permit allows an alcoholic content of 3.75 per cent by volume. From five to 25 cases may be furnished to drug stores weekly according to their size and no prescription will be required of consumers who feel the need of more and better health.

The kick, from the healthy wet's standpoint, lies not in the alcoholic content but in the warning that the tonic will not be pleasant if treated as a beverage. Instead of the 7 to 10 per cent of malt solids as in pre-prohibition beer, it will contain 25 per cent. As a result officials said excessive drinking of the tonic will produce illness.

The permits for the manufacture and sale was issued for six months and provides that the brewers shall assist the government in keeping it out of the hands of bootleggers.

Mrs. Walter C. Adler, Pittsburgh, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the State Greeters, will attend the two day session of the quarterly meeting to be held in Gettysburg, April 9th and 10th. This information was contained in a message to the local committee making arrangements for the gathering of hotelmen and women here next month.

Mrs. Adler said that she would be "pleased to receive the members of the auxiliary in Gettysburg, April 9th and 10th, and I am anxiously looking forward to our quarterly session." Mrs. Adler expressed confidence that a large representation of the association would attend the quarterly conference and that she had received assurances from a number of the members that they would arrive in Gettysburg early on Friday, April 9. The conference does not open until the evening of April 9.

The local committee is bending every effort to make the stay of the hotelmen and women in Gettysburg as enjoyable and as pleasant as possible. An elaborate program of entertainment has been arranged, including dinners, smokers, theatre parties and so on.

President Free of the Greeters also expressed confidence in a large delegation of Greeter members attending the conference. This is the first time the Greeters have met in Gettysburg.

FINISH SURVEY OF DAM SITES

Improvement of Various Fishing Stream Dams Is Urged by Sportsmen; Meet Wednesday.

The committee appointed by the local camp of the Central Pennsylvania Conservation Association has practically completed the preliminary survey of the various dam sites considered for improvement, and has estimates of cost ready for approval by the State Association. In order to get the endorsement of the local sportsmen, and a definite expression as to just where the efforts of the association should be centered, it has been decided to hold a meeting of those interested at the Hoffman Hotel Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

If anything is to be accomplished this spring, immediate action is necessary, and very sportsman is urged to attend this meeting, whether a member of the association or not, said a local sportsman.

The gun club will hold the weekly practice shoot over the local traps Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock. A special program has been arranged. The next meeting of the gun club is set for the first Tuesday in April, at which time the various committees will report on what has been accomplished and final arrangements perfected for the two day shoot scheduled here April 21 and 22.

Extend Lines Of Electric Company

Extension of the present lines of the local Metropolitan Edison Electric Company, formerly the Gettysburg Electric Company, to give service to Frogtown on the Baltimore "pike, several miles south of Two Taverns, and to Biglerville by way of the Biglerville road, is now being made.

The Gettysburg Electric Company connected with the Biglerville lines at Orttanna, under the only arrangement. Now the local lines are being extended to the Goldenville road, where they meet the Biglerville lines.

Frogtown has never had the advantage of electric service, nor have any of the intermediate communities, so that the extension south of town should be welcomed by rural residents.

Announcement was made recently by the Metropolitan Edison Company of its acquisition of the Gettysburg and Hanover Electric Companies and other subsidiaries in the Cumberland Valley. No other extensions are planned at present, according to a local representative of the company.

SETTLEMENT MAY MATERIALIZE IN NOTED FARM CASE

Attorneys Argue Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Action 2 Hours.

Before nightfall, an agreement may be reached out of court satisfactory both to H. N. Gitt, trustee, and S. G. Spangler, a creditor, and the receivers of the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company. The attempt to reach an agreement was begun in court here this morning when for two hours counsel for both sides argued before Judge D. P. McPherson.

In event an agreement cannot be reached, Judge McPherson will be called upon to render a decision in the action, which began in court here last Saturday as a distinct surprise to court attaches. That the five properties in the upper part of Adams county, which comprise the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company, will be ordered resold in case of a disagreement seemed certain in court house circles this afternoon.

Should opposing attorneys reach an agreement, it will be such that the creditors of the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company, whose obligations total approximately $65,000, will share in a distribution of the proceeds of the sale, under the provisions of which they will agree to the divestiture of the liens against the farms, so that a clear title can be given.

Attorneys Doubtful
Attorneys interested in the proceedings this afternoon indicated that an agreement cannot be reached, because the claims of the two sides are too widely separated, and would require material concessions by all parties at interest.

When court adjourned at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon, after being in session since 10 o'clock with the Buttonwood matter before it constantly, Thursday was fixed as the next sitting. It is considered doubtful if Judge McPherson will be prepared on Thursday to hand down a decision on today's argument, but that he will be ready to put into effect an order by which the five farms can be operated pending his final disposition of the question.

Answers Are Filed
Answers to the rules issued by Judge McPherson Saturday were filed with Prothonotary C. B. Yohe when court convened this morning by Attorney J. Donald Swope, who with Attorney J. L. Williams represented the three receivers of the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company in court today.

Mr. Gitt and Mr. Spangler, the petitioners, were represented by Attorneys John D. Keith and Robert Wible.

After the petitions of Gitt and Spangler were read, the answers were briefly discussed as to the points admitted and the facts denied. Attorney Keith then offered in evidence all of the original petitions, decrees and returns applying to the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company since the first time it was before the court.

Attorney Keith also presented, as answers, petitions from other lien creditors of the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company.

Four witnesses gave testimony in behalf of the petitioners. They were the three receivers of the defunct company, Grover C. Myers, E. H. Markley and Pius A. Miller, and Mr. Spangler, one of the fourteen lien creditors. Examination of the witnesses was conducted in rapid time, and the petitioners closed.

Attorneys Argue Issue
Attorney Swope also entered records in the Buttonwood case, and afterward arguments by the attorneys began. Mr. Keith beginning, reading from a typewritten manuscript, a copy of which he presented to the court before he began.

Attorneys Swope and Williams then followed with arguments on behalf of the receivers, in the course of which the subject of an agreement came forward as a possibility.

It was stated at the court house that, should an agreement be reached, the present action would be discontinued and Mr. Gitt, the trustee, would be given possession of the properties on April 1 in accordance with the agreement under which the places were purchased.

PLANK MEMORIAL CAMPAIGN OPENS; 2 CONTRIBUTIONS

Charles T. Zeigler and George F. Mitchell Are First Gettysburg Contributors.

Charles T. Zeigler, proprietor of the Blue Parrot Tea Garden, and George F. Mitchell, proprietor of Mitchell's Restaurant, Centre Square, are the first Gettysburg contributors to the Eddie Plank Memorial Fund. Mr. Zeigler's check for $100 was received by the Memorial Fund Committee last night, while Mr. Mitchell's check for $50 was received this morning.

In contributing to the fund Mr. Zeigler said:

"I am in hearty accord with the action of the Eddie Plank Memorial Fund Committee and the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of Gettysburg College in dedicating the new $125,000 college gymnasium to the memory of Gettysburg's most prominent major league hurler. It is a fitting tribute to the memory of the late pitching wizard of Athletics' fame and Gettysburg can indeed be proud of its contribution to the national pastime. In perpetuating the memory of Mr. Plank by the dedication of the splendid new gymnasium, his clean sportsmanship and gentlemanly conduct during his seventeen years' activity in the major leagues will forever be an inspiration to the generations to come. The committee is to be commended for its action and should receive the hearty support of the entire citizenry of Gettysburg and Adams county. I am confident of the success of the memorial fund committee."

Urges Harmony
Mr. Mitchell's comment emphasized the need of harmonized cooperation of townspeople as well as the residents of the rural sections of the county in the memorial project, as an example to the rest of the nation of the esteem in which Mr. Plank was held by those most intimate with him. Mr. Mitchell said:

"I am pleased to contribute to such a worthy cause as the Eddie Plank Memorial Fund Committee. I am glad to know that the Gettysburg College gymnasium will be dedicated to the late 'Eddie.' This movement should unite all of Gettysburg in what I consider a common cause for the continued community growth and prosperity of Gettysburg. This is an opportunity for the whole of Gettysburg to express its sentiments for a united town founded on good will and faith in our fellow men. My sincerest wishes are extended the Eddie Plank Memorial Fund Committee."

The contributions of Mr. Zeigler and Mr. Mitchell formally open the drive for funds for the Plank Memorial in this district. The committee had set April 12 as the opening date of the campaign for Gettysburg and Adams county, but with receipt of Mr. Zeigler's $100 contribution last night, it was decided to carry on the work immediately.

Contributions had previously been received from persons residing some distance from Gettysburg. These will not be announced for several days, pending the completion of the selection of the honorary committee.

Further Liquidation On Stock Exchange

(By Associated Press.)
New York, March 30.—Further liquidation developed at the opening of today's market carrying prices irregularly lower. Buying support was apparent in a few issues. Powerful speculative forces continued to battle for control of the market with the bull element having much the best of the contest. Although the market continued to reflect a considerable volume of distressed selling, it was confined later mostly to the ordinarily inactive shares. On the other hand gains of two points or more were quite numerous in a wide assortment of industrials and railroads. Call money opened at five per cent.

2 Lost With Mail Sled On Lake Mich.

Traverse City, Mich., March 30.—Martin Hoeft and John Moleski, mail couriers, are lost on the ice of Lake Michigan between North Manitou Island and Leland, with a blinding snowstorm blowing down the lake.

At 2 A. M. Monday they left Leland, Michigan, to meet Tracy Grosvenor, John Burns and John Kinnucan, who left Manitou Island at the same hour. The two parties were to meet half way between the island and the mainland and exchange mail, the first the island has sent or received since February 15. At 10:30 A. M. the party from the island reached the mainland without having met Hoeft and Moleski. Shortly after the two parties left their respective ports, each dragging a sleigh load of mail, the snowstorm started and the wind shifted. Neither Hoeft nor Moleski carried a compass.

Bonfires were built Monday night along the shores of both the mainland and island to guide them. Residents say it is useless to send out searching parties in the heavy snowstorm. It is fourteen miles from the island to the mainland.

BYRD READY TO LEAVE FOR POLE

Flyer in Command of Arctic Party Bids Adieu to President Coolidge; 44 in Expedition.

(By Associated Press.)

New York, March 30.—Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd was in New York today ready to start next Monday on the last lap of his airplane flight to the North Pole.

Parachutes, radio and Eskimos will play an important part in the expedition.

Because of the roughness of the ice when it is necessary to make a landing, a man will be dropped in a parachute from the plane in which the exploration will be made. If he cannot find a suitable base for the plane another man will be dropped. Eskimos at a nearby camp will be advised by radio as to the point where the men fell, so that they may be rescued by dog teams.

The expedition hopes to make a first jump of 400 miles into the far north. After an advanced base has been established the planes will hop off for the North Pole.

Washington, March 30.—Lieut. Com. Richard E. Byrd, Jr., U. S. N., retired, said good-by to President Coolidge Monday preparatory to departing next Monday from the Brooklyn Navy Yard on the first lap of his journey to explore the northern polar regions by airplane.

The Byrd expedition will sail at 3 p. m. with John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Edsell Ford, F. Trubee Davison and possible other sponsors of the trip aboard, including Vincent Astor, who will bring back the visitors on a yacht after the steamer Chantier clears New York harbor and heads northward. Rear-Admiral Silas Plunkett, commanding the Brooklyn yard, also will see the expedition off.

Byrd Commands Expedition. The Chantier will carry forty-four persons, picking up an "ice skipper" at Tromso, Norway, the only port at which she will call on her way to Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, where the air route starts.

Byrd will command the expedition, while an enlisted pilot of the Navy Department, Floyd Bennett, will be second in command. The third officer will be G. O. Noville, lieutenant of the Naval Reserve Corps, and the sailing master of the Chantier will be Captain Brenna, experienced merchant seaman.

Wife's "14 Points" Rejected By Hubby

New York, March 30.—The "fourteen points" offered by Mrs. Virginia Mowbray Whitney as a basis for reconciliation with her husband, Arthur Whitney, Jr., a stunt fiend, went the way of many other trategies Monday, when a separation and $75 weekly alimony were awarded her.

She charged cruel and inhuman treatment, after her husband had rejected her conditions because he said "they read like the terms of a vanguard general offered to a vanquished foe."

The "fourteen points" stressed a "50-50" marriage, insisted that the home be run on the basis of "kindness" and the twelfth point provided that there be "no more talk of bachelor freedom nor entertaining of young ladies by you."

FASTS 44 DAYS; WINS $20,000; 500 PROPOSE

Berlin, March 30.—Herr Jolly, professional faster, established a new record of forty-four days for abstinence from food, but he was helped out of his glass cage, which was carpeted with cigarette butts and strewn with mineral-water bottles, as complete a physical wreck as could be imagined. He had beaten the world's record, held by Signor Mulatti, of Italy, by one day.

Herr Jolly, emerging with a profuse growth of beard, was eagerly received by the crowds and physicians who had been keenly interested in his case.

Though unable to walk and speaking in a feeble voice, Jolly's mind seemed very alert. He remarked that during the last three days he had been obliged to reduce his smoking to ten cigarettes daily, as they affected his stomach.

The doctors found the faster's digestive organs entirely dormant and decided to take him to the hospital, where he will be fed a liquid diet exclusively, several teaspoonsful at a time, under the closest medical observation.

Jolly, who is 25 years old, learned the art of fasting during the French occupation of his Rhenish homeland. He was imprisoned and decided on a hunger strike and succeeded in holding out for eighteen days.

On this occasion when he entered his cage he weighed 130 pounds, and his weight Monday night was about 103. He had 400 bottles of mineral water and 5000 cigarettes when he was locked in.

The gross receipts of his exhibition amounted to $45,000, of which $10,000 was deducted for the municipal entertainment tax. His manager received $15,000, leaving receipts for the faster approximating $20,000. More than 300,000 Germans saw him in his cage.

While in the cage he received more than 500 marriage proposals.

Mother Leaps To Death With Baby

Sharon, March 30.—Mrs. Helen Geressy, aged 19, jumped from a bridge here Monday into the Shenango River, carrying her 10-day-old baby to death with her.

A note left at her home in Farrell, Pennsylvania, addressed to her husband, said:

"I still love you, but I'm going to kill myself and the baby. Good bye."

Investigators have not been able to establish the motive. Several hours after the tragedy they had not located the husband.

"BIG TIM" MURPHY BACK IN CHICAGO

Chicago, March 30.—Shorn of the glamor that attended his moves before he went to prison, "Big Tim" Murphy came back to Chicago Monday after serving a sentence in Leavenworth Penitentiary for participation in the $385,000 Dearborn Street Station mail robbery.

Instead of the former labor boss being met by a throng of "gas-house workers," including the union members over whom he once ruled, the "crowd" consisted of a handful of reporters, Murphy's wife and two or three friends.

"Big Tim" expected to meet federal officers with orders for his commitment to jail again for failure to pay a $10,000 fine assessed in connection with the robbery sentence, but they were not present.

COURT REJECTS CHAPMAN'S PLEA

Condemned Slayer of Connecticut Policeman Faces Death, April 6; Expect New Steps.

New Haven, Conn., March 30.—One of the three last-minute efforts to prevent the hanging of Gerald Chapman on April 6 failed Monday when Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas denied an application for a writ of habeas corpus, raising the constitutional question whether Chapman had a fair trial a year ago in the state supreme court. Had the writ been granted Chapman's execution would have been stayed automatically until the United States Supreme Court again had passed on the case.

Ray M. Wiley, of Chapman's counsel, who presented the petition, was criticized by State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, for statements appearing in the petition, which Mr. Alcorn said "didn't come from a healthy mind." He called the court's attention to one paragraph which he said contained allegations which were "impertinent and offensive to the President, to the attorney-general, the courts which have passed on this case and to me."

Charges Tamed Contempt. The state's attorney declared that Chapman's counsel should be judged in contempt of court and that his disbarment would be moved by the state's attorney were Mr. Wiley a Connecticut lawyer. Wiley is from Springfield, Massachusetts.

In denying the petition Judge Thomas said he saw in it "nothing new," since virtually all of the points raised had been passed upon by other procedures. He said that all elements pointed to a fair trial and that the chief justice of the state supreme court had disposed of any unfair aspect in the court's decision written by him.

HAS PHOTO OF PINCHOT LETTERS

Methodist Preacher Fails to Reveal Letter From Mrs. Pinchot; Did Not Promise Influence.

(By Associated Press.)

Philadelphia, March 30.—A photostatic copy of the much discussed "fishing letter" bearing the signature of Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the governor, was taken to the Philadelphia Methodist Episcopal conference Monday by the Rev. Dr. P. T. Mutchler, secretary of the Sabbath Observance association, who has said Mrs. Pinchot by intimidation had promised to use her influence in favor of a Sunday fishing law.

Last Saturday Mrs. Pinchot in a letter to Dr. Mutchler denied she had written as stated by him and demanded a retraction.

The copy of the letter was not shown to the conference but Dr. Mutchler announced that he would show it to any member of the conference if he desired. Prior to this Bishop Berry stated he did not wish any partisanship in the conference. The original of the photostatic was written to Bright F. Urban, of Reading, Secretary of the Berks County Rod and Gun Association, on March 15, 1923. The letter stated that Mrs. Pinchot agreed that Sunday fishing should be permitted and that she favored a change in the law. The letter concluded:

"Unfortunately I don't see that I can help very much about it; however if there has been a law introduced, do let me know about it."

The letter did not say she would use her influence in favor of the passage of such a bill.

CONVICTED BANK HEAD HAS STROKE

Pittsburgh, March 30.—John A. Bell, 72, president of the closed Carnegie Trust Company, is in a critical condition at his home as a result of a stroke of paralysis suffered last Friday, it was learned Monday. Friends said Bell was in bed unable to move and that physicians were holding a consultation to consider the advisability of removing him to a hospital. Bell was convicted of embezzlement in connection with the affairs of the Carnegie Trust Company and was sentenced to serve six and a half years in the Allegheny county jail. An appeal from the sentence is pending.

Will Refuse To Send Physician On Old Charges

(By Associated Press.)

Asbury Park, March 30.—Governor A. Harry Moore in a statement telephoned from Trenton announced that he would not honor any extradition papers which might be presented to him for the return to Binghamton, New York, of Dr. Edward P. Osbaldeston, 93-year old physician and Crimean War veteran.

Dr. Osbaldeston was arrested Friday on 45 year old charges that he is a horse thief and an escaped prisoner. The arrest was made by Deputy Sheriff S. Foster Black, of Binghamton, who himself is 91 years old.

INSTALMENT 32

"What brings you here?" I cried in greeting, as he stepped into the room.

"Are you still for Beaugency?" he asked sharply, throwing back his head.

"Why, yes," I answered, wondering at this excitement.

"Then you have seen nothing of Saint-Eustache and his men?"

"Nothing."

"Yet they must have passed this way not many hours ago." Then tossing his hat on the table and speaking with sudden vehemence: "If you have any interest in the family of Lavedan, you will return upon the instant to Toulouse."

The mention of Lavedan was enough to quicken my pulses. Yet in the past two days I had mastered resignation, and in doing that we school ourselves to much restraint. I turned slowly, and surveyed the little Captain attentively. His black eyes sparkled and his moustaches bristled with excitement. Clearly he had news of import. I turned to the landlord.

"Leave us, Monsieur l'Hôte," said I shortly; and when he had departed, "What of the Lavedan family, Castelroux?" I inquired as calmly as I might.

"The Chevalier de Saint-Eustache left Toulouse at six o'clock this morning for Lavedan."

"A world of odd meetings this, Saint-Eustache."

Swift the suspicion of his errand broke upon my mind.

"He has betrayed the Vicomte?" I half inquired, half asserted.

Castelroux nodded. "He has obtained a warrant for his apprehension from the Keeper of the Seals, and is gone to execute it. In the course of a few days Lavedan will be in danger of being no more than a name. This Saint-Eustache is driving a brisk trade, by God, and some fine prizes have already fallen to his lot. But if you add them all together, they are not likely to yield as much as this his latest expedition. Unless you intervene, Bardelys, the Vicomte de Lavedan is doomed and his family homeless."

"I will intervene," I cried. "By God, I will! And as for Saint-Eustache—he was born under a propitious star, indeed, if he escapes the gallows. He little dreams that I am still to be reckoned with. There, Castelroux, I will start for Lavedan at once."

Already I was striding to the door, when the Gascon called me back.

"What good will that do?" he asked. "Were it not better first to return to Toulouse and obtain a counter-warrant from the King?" There was wisdom in his words—much wisdom. But my blood was afire, and I was in too hot a haste to reason.

"Return to Toulouse?" I echoed scornfully. "A waste of time, Captain. No, I will go straight to Lavedan. I need no counter-warrant. I know too much of this Chevalier's affairs, and my very presence should be enough to stay his hand. He is as foul a traitor as you'll find in France; but for the moment God bless him for a very opportune knave. Gilles!" I called, throwing wide the door. "Gilles!"

"Monsieur," he answered, hastening to me.

"Put back the carriage and saddle me a horse," I commanded. "And bid your fellows mount at once and await me in the courtyard. We are not going to Beaugency, Gilles. We ride north—to Lavedan."

CHAPTER XXVIII

Saint-Eustache is Obstinate

On the occasion of my first visit to Lavedan I had disregarded—or, rather, Fate had contrived that I should disregard—Castelroux's suggestion that I should go with all the panoply of power—with my followers, my liveries, and my equipages to compose the magnificence all France had come to associate with my name, and thus dazzle by my brilliant luster the lady I was come to win. As you may remember, I had crept into the chateau like a thief in the night, wounded, bedraggled, and of miserable aspect, seeking to provoke compassion rather than admiration.

Not so now that I made my second visit. I availed myself of all the splendor to which I owed my title of "Magnificent," and rode into the courtyard of the Chateau de Lavedan preceded by twenty well-mounted knaves wearing the gorgeous Saint-Pol liveries of scarlet and gold, with the Bardelys escutcheon brodered on the breasts witted a rogue as ever rode with me, took in the situation at a glance. Knowing how much I desired to make a goodly show, he whispered an order. This resulted in the couples dividing at the gateway, one going to the left and one to the right, so that as they came they spread themselves in a crescent, and, drawing rein, they faced forward, confronting and half surrounding the Chevalier's company.

As each couple appeared, the curiosity—the uneasiness, probably—of Saint-Eustache and his men had increased, and their expectancy was on tiptoe to see what lord it was went abroad with such regal pomp, when I appeared in the gateway and advanced at the trot into the middle of the quadrangle. There I drew rein and doffed my hat to them as they stood, open-mouthed and gaping one and all. If it was a theatrical display, a parade worthy of a tilt-ground, it was yet a noble and imposing advent, and their gaping told me that it was not without effect. The men looked uneasily at the Chevalier; the Chevalier looked uneasily at his men; mademoiselle, very pale, lowered her eyes and pressed her lips yet more tightly; the Vicomtesse uttered an oath of astonishment; whilst Lavedan, too dignified to manifest surprise, greeted me with a sober bow.

Behind them on the steps I caught sight of a group of domestics, old Anatole standing slightly in advance of his fellows, and wondering, no doubt, whether this were, indeed, the bedraggled Lesperon of a little while ago—for if I had thought of pomp in the display of my knaves, no less had I considered it in the decking of my own person. Without any of the ribbons and fopperies that mark the comely, yet was I clad, plumed, and armed with a magnificence such as I'll swear had not been seen within the grey walls of that old castle in the lifetime of any of those that were now present.

Gilles leapt from his horse as I drew rein, and hastened to hold my stirrup, with a murmured "Monsieur," which title drew a fresh astonishment into the eyes of the beholders.

I advanced leisurely towards Saint-Eustache, and addressed him with such condescension as I might a groom, for to impress and quell a man of this type your best weapon is the arrogance that a nobler spirit would resent.

"A world of odd meetings this, Saint-Eustache," I smiled disdainfully. "A world of strange comings and goings, and of strange transformations. The last time we were here we stood mutually as guests of Monsieur le Vicomte; at present you appear to be officiating as a—tipstaff."

"Monsieur!" He coloured, and he uttered the word in accents of awakened resentment. I looked into his eyes, coldly, impassively, as if waiting to hear what he might have to add, and so I stayed until his glance fell and his spirit was frozen in him. He knew me, and he knew how much I was to be feared. A word from me to the King might send him to the wheel. It was upon this I played. Presently, as his eye fell—

"Is your business with me, Monsieur Bardelys?" he asked, and at that utterance of my name there was a commotion on the steps, whilst the Vicomte started, and his eyes frowned upon me, and the Vicomtesse looked up suddenly to scan me with a fresh interest. She beheld at last in the flesh the gentleman who had played so notorious a part, ten years ago, in that scandal connected with the Duchesse de Bourgogne, of which she never tired of reciting the details. And think that she had sat at table with him day by day and been unconscious of that momentous fact! Such, I make no doubt, was what passed through her mind at the moment, and to judge from her expression, I should say that the excitement of beholding the Magnificent Bardelys had for the nonce eclipsed even her husband's condition and the imminent sequestration of Lavedan.

"My business is with you, Chevalier," said I. "It relates to your mission here."

His jaw fell. "You wish—?"

"To desire you to withdraw your men and quit Lavedan at once, abandoning the execution of your warrant."

He flashed me a look of impotent hate. "You know of the existence of my warrant, Monsieur de Bardelys, and you must therefore realize that a royal mandate alone can exempt me from delivering Monsieur de Lavedan to the Keeper of the Seals."

"My only warrant," I answered, somewhat baffled, but far from abandoning hope, "is my word. You shall say to the Garde des Sceaux that you have done this upon the authority of the Marquis de Bardelys, and you have my promise that His Majesty shall confirm my action."

In saying that I said too much, as I was quickly to realize.

Bill Wood Tells Philadelphia Alumni He Has Good Material; Lauded as Mentor By Pollock

Eddie Pollock, sports writer for The Philadelphia Public Ledger, says that Bill Wood, grid coach at Gettysburg College, is the first mentor to declare publicly that he has good material for next year's eleven and that if his team is not a winner it will be the coach's fault. Pollock says:

"Bill Wood is an unusual football coach. Before an enthusiastic gathering of Gettysburg College alumni here the other night he admitted that it would be his fault if the boys of the battlefield were not welded into a good football team next season."

"If you know coaches, you will recognize this as an uncommon admission. The usual procedure is to bemoan the lack of good material. This is done for several reasons."

"First, the coach doesn't want the alumni to expect too much. That's the safety-first plan, the plan of self-protection. If the teams fail to produce, the material takes the blame. If it does produce, the coach gets the credit."

"Secondly, the coach doesn't want the players to believe he thinks they are good. That makes for laziness, lack of spirit in competition for the various positions and oversized heads among the veterans."

"Thirdly, the coach doesn't want his rival coaches to believe he has a strong squad. That makes for preparedness in enemy camps. It is better to catch the opponents unaware of the potential power."

"But Wood is not the average coach."

"There isn't time now to talk of last season," he told the alumni, "we are looking to next season, and if Gettysburg doesn't have a good football team it will be the coach's fault. The material is there."

"Bill Wood is running the chance of the players becoming 'swell-headed,' of the alumni expecting too much and of the enemy being prepared. He believes in himself and in his ability to overcome these handicaps."

"Wood could have drawn more credit to himself and heaped the laurel higher on his broad brow by talking of what he did last year and how he developed a championship Class B eleven. But instead of posing as a hero of 1925 he chose to make himself a question mark in regard to 1926."

"Bill Wood is an unusual football coach."

Won't Blame It On Quarterback

"If Gettysburg should not have a good team next season," he continued, "I promise you the coach will not blame it on the quarterback."

"To my mind, the coach who blames a defeat on a bonehead play by the quarterback has no place in college football. He should not be allowed to coach."

"What is the quarterback? He is a reflection of the coach. He is taught by the coach how he should run the team. If he doesn't run the team properly it is a reflection upon the teaching ability of the coach."

"If you stop to think of it, the coach who blames his quarterback for a defeat blames himself."

"How many tutors have pointed to their quarterbacks as reasons for their failures? We have met a great many of them."

"We have sympathized with and believed in some of them. Others we felt were merely trying to frame an alibi."

"Naturally, all quarterbacks do not have the same football intelligence. They vary in their ability to digest the teachings of their mentor and to remember. The same coach using the same methods of instruction has a good quarterback this year and a poor pilot next season."

"Take any group of students. Some make high marks and some low marks in their examinations, although they have listened to the same lectures and may have spent the same length of time in textbook study."

"Often the quarterback, through no fault of the coach, is to blame for a defeat. But the coach, in regard to the boy, should not openly blame him."

"We admire the coach who is big enough to place the burden on his own shoulders and quietly go about correcting the faults of his erring field general."

Spirit of Sports

"In his talk Wood struck a new note in the discussion concerning the alleged overemphasis of football."

"Football," he said, "is not being and has not been overemphasized. On the contrary, the full worth of the game is just coming into recognition."

"For years Latin and Greek and mathematics and philosophy and other subjects of culture have been taught in our universities and colleges, and still the nations of the world are ready to spring at each other in deadly conflict."

"There is nothing that makes for better relations among men and among nations than athletics. If the spirit of sportsmanship, so well developed in football, spread throughout the world we would have a lasting peace."

"The spirit of football is spreading throughout America, and it is well that it is. I see no danger in the great throngs of spectators at college contests. I hope they grow and grow and that larger and larger stadiums are built."

"The growth of football is to be encouraged. It means the growth of sportsmanship."

Likes New Rules

"Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg, also stressed sportsmanship in his talk."

"Let us not concern ourselves," he said, "with what the other colleges and universities are doing to enforce their eligibility rules. Let us concern ourselves with what is going on at Gettysburg. Let us be sure we are right."

"For many years eligibility rules have been strictly enforced at Gettysburg, and they will continue to be. No man will represent Gettysburg on the athletic field who misrepresents his college in the classroom."

"After the dinner we chatted for a few minutes with Wood and asked him his opinion of the change in the forward-pass rule."

"We had expected he would be against the alteration. The forward pass has made it possible for the small-college teams to meet large universities on almost an equal scale. The speed of the play and its execution have converted the game from a close-up battle of beef and brawn to an open game of speed and talent. Any limitation of the pass would have a great effect on the small-college teams."

But Wood surprised us.

"I like the changes," he said.

ROPE-JUMPING IS HEALTHFUL

Spring is the season for marbles and skipping rope. Ordinarily the skipping rope is good exercise, says Dr. E. H. Arnold, president of the New Haven Normal School for physical education, in Hygeia for April. It develops the legs and the wind. Firefighters use it for this purpose.

The mechanical stimulus to the intestines, from the jar of jumping, will help to overcome habitual constipation. Furthermore, rope jumping is exciting and fun, and, if done in a group, it develops cooperation. At the same time it is not so emotionally upsetting as some of the team games, and for this reason is better for girls, thinks Dr. Arnold.

If it is done in a group, using the long rope, it is doubly safe, for each girl will only have three or four jumps every four or five minutes. In this way, plenty of rest is provided. Even the shorter rope is not harmful, for it has been found that the heart mechanically reacts to protect itself. After five jumps, the heart does not beat any faster than it does after one or two, although it does beat faster while jumping than when standing still.

Some mothers feel that skipping rope is harmful to the health of their daughters. If the child has a weak heart, or has just recovered from some communicable disease that may have weakened her heart temporarily, she should not jump rope until a physician has examined her and found her heart in good condition.

All in all, it seems that rope jumping, particularly in a group with the long rope, is healthful fun and good exercise for girls.

FRIEND TO THE LIVING

I'd rather say "how good you are" than "good he used to be."
I'd rather pin a rose upon your coat for all to see
Than send a wreath of roses with a card of sympathy.

I'd rather share your burden now and walk a mile with you
Than come upon a solemn day your lifeless clay to view,
And ask in faltering voice if there is something I can do.

I'd rather prove my friendship to my friend the while he lives,
Than be the one who rushes round when death has called and gives
His proof of true devotion to his dead friend's relatives.

Of course if you should cross the stream before I'm called to go,
I shall be one who'll mourn for you, for I shall miss you so,
But that I am your friend today is what I'd have you know.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

In the story before this you remember the little rabbit had received a letter from his friend, the Circus Elephant. Donkey Longears, the Rabbitville Postman, had stopped the Luckymobile to deliver it, that's what he had. And then, most obligingly, he sat down on a stone to wait for the little bunny's answer. You see, the little rabbit just couldn't Linger Longer Lucky, but must answer it right away quick.

"Don't waste any time," said the kind donkey. "Aunt Columbia and Uncle Sam don't pay me to wait for letters." And wasn't dear Uncle Lucky kind to lend his fountain pen to the bunny boy? Well, I'll say so, and pretty soon, not so very long, and not so very many inky blinks, the letter was finished and handed to Donkey Longears, who quickly tucked it away in his bag.

Then with a happy, friendly bray, The good old donkey trotted away, The load of letters in his sack. And an old gray overcoat on his back. His number I think was twenty-two, But any old number I guess would do.

With a wave of his blue silk polka-dot handkerchief and a honk of the horn, the old gentleman rabbit rolled away in the Luckymobile, and pretty soon as fast that the hind wheels could hardly keep up with the front ones.

Well, by and by, not so very far, he stopped in front of a tiny green house near Lilly Pond Lake. Hopping up to the front door, he knocked three times and a half, and in less than 500 short seconds, Grandmother Goose appeared. But, Oh dear me! She had the plumbago from eating too many plums and was dreadfully worried about herself. So dear, kind Uncle Lucky hopped into the sitting room to explain how he had been cured of the rheumatism, and while each one was trying to do all the talking, all of a sudden a rifle shot rang out sharp and clear and to see what was the trouble, the old gentleman rabbit hopped quickly out on the front stoop.

Dear, Oh dear me! I just hate to tell what he saw; but I must, just the same. The bad Miller's Boy was running after the little rabbit, and shooting off his gun as fast as he could. But he couldn't shoot as fast nor as well as the bunny boy could hop, and pretty soon the Miller's Boy stopped shooting, but the little rabbit didn't stop hopping. No, sireen! Maybe he thought he'd grow lazy if he stopped! And the next moment he was safe inside the dear Old Bramble Patch.

"Dearest me!" sighed Lady Love, his pretty bunny mother. "Will troubles never cease and disagreeable folk let little rabbits live in peace?"

"In the sweet bye and bye," answered her cheerful little bunny boy, as over to the telephone he hopped to call up Grandmother Goose to find out if dear Uncle Lucky were safe and well. And wasn't he relieved to hear her answer:

"He's just as well as well can be. Talking and drinking Cambric Tea. After we've played a game of Tricks He'll start for home at half past six."

So please wait for the next story to hear how the old gentleman rabbit escaped from Mr. Wicked Wolf.

COMMUNICATION

HUGENTUGLER A REAL HE-MAN
Biglerville, Pa.
March 29, 1926.

To the Editor,
The Gettysburg Times.

Dear Sir:

If I were a candidate for any office in York city, or York county, there is nothing I would court more than the opposition of the self-styled "committee of 500" headed by Mr. Richley, the automobile man.

Fact of the matter is, this "committee" engineered by Richley, by some means or other, managed to get the Republican nomination from Mayor Hugentugler for Chief Engineer Richley in the last campaign for mayor in York. Mayor Hugentugler's friends got wise to the "dupe" trick after the primary and insisted that Mr. Hugentugler run independently. He finally acquiesced to the persuasions of his friends and ran. What he did to the "committee" and the insurgent Republicans, likewise the Democrats, in the general election, despite the opposition of the Much-Tooted Sam Lewis et. al., who opposed him, is a matter of history. Mayor Hugentugler was re-elected by a nice plurality despite all the opposition of insurgent Republicans, moralists, Democrats and the like.

Mayor Hugentugler can't be beaten for any office he permits his name to come before the electorate for in York city or county. Voters of York county, as elsewhere, can't help but admire and support a man who plays the game clean and square, whether it is politics, or what not.

If Mayor Hugentugler decides to become a candidate for Congress from the York-Adams district, as we note from The Gettysburg Times and as has been suggested by his friends, he will win the nomination and election "hands-down," and both counties will be glad to point to him as a congressman, and as their representative in the national legislative halls, with pride.

Please print this in your "Communications" column and instead of signing my name, just sign it as coming from a

THINKS GEORGE IS BIG "CHEESE"

Pittsburgh.—George Washington stands high in the estimation of George Xilas, a Greek resident of McKeesport, as was evidenced by his answers to questions put to him in the United States District Court when he appeared for examination upon his application for citizenship papers.

"Who is the president of the United States?" he was asked.

"George Washington," he replied.

"Who is the governor of Pennsylvania?"

"George Washington."

"Who makes the laws of the country?"

Again came the reply, "George Washington."

Xilas' failure to acquaint himself with statesmen now living resulted in an extension of time being granted him to prepare for examination before he becomes a United States citizen.

Here's the Right Way to Combat Autointoxication

"Self-Poisoning" some people call it, and others like the name "Intestinal Toxemia." But whatever you call it, one of our big doctors says that the average adult American is suffering from it.

Autointoxication usually starts with constipation—much of the food you eat stays in the intestines too long and putrefies, causing a "Poison factory" to be set up in the colon. This virulent poison is absorbed by the intestines, gets into the blood stream and eventually poisons every living cell in the body.

Most meat eaters poison themselves because meat putrefies quickly and forms poisonous microbes. Therefore if you have autointoxication avoid all meats, eat sparingly of fish and eggs and confine yourself as much as possible to green vegetables and fruits.

If you will follow this advice and in addition take two Toxi-Tabs every night before going to bed you can speedily help to get rid of the tens of thousands of wild or poisonous microbes that right now are making their headquarters in your colon.

Autointoxication shortens life—it has a pernicious influence on growth, mentality and activity. Some physicians go so far as to say that these dread poisons get to every organ in the body through the blood and are responsible for gout, rheumatism, gastric ulcers, colitis, appendicitis, cirrhosis of the liver, arterio, sclerosis, myocarditis, Bright's disease, headache, dull eyes, yellow skin, nervousness and lack of ambition.

Take two Toxi-Tabs every night followed by a glass of water and continue to take them until your constipation, sluggishness and every symptom of autointoxication has disappeared.

You can always get a package of Toxi-Tabs at People's Drug Store or any reliable pharmacist and there is 30 days' treatment in each package.—adv.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DOUBT

THE man never lived who didn't doubt.

And the greater a man's capacity for thought, for imagination, and for achievement, the deeper do these doubts dig with their roots.

So that one of the most sublime things in this world is doubt—because it precedes faith.

Put doubt in a man's mind and it won't take long for you to measure his caliber. All great men have doubted. They have had times when they fairly trembled because of indecision and doubt. But at such a time greatness always broods.

Who can measure the anguish of a doubting man? Not the doubt of the cynic or of the boaster, but of him who honestly searches for the truth and who sincerely desires to contribute worth and service to others.

A Washington at Valley Forge, a Lee at Arlington, a Lincoln in the White House at Washington.

The story of human life is one of billions of doubts.

Even when we do something that seems to us very right, we are enveloped in doubts. We never seem to be quite sure, never quite strong enough to risk all or to believe all.

Our days are filled with wondering. Why didn't we do this? Why did we do that?

To go into the work of life with the spirit "to gain or lose it all" is an heroic thing to do. To strive has its reward, perhaps not less than to have achieved.

No wonder that there is a Staying Hand in the world. Somebody, some special somebody, must be around to guide and point us ahead into the right road. Or else we would all be continually losing our way.

There is something more than beauty to that little prayer our mothers taught us so long ago:

"Now I lay me down to sleep;
I pray the Lord my soul to keep.
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

Airplanes Help "Sourdoughs" to Reach Latest Gold Strike In Wilds of Northern Ontario

Hudson, Ontario.—A steady movement of fortune seekers up through the snow-bound wilderness of northern Ontario to the Red Lake district promises to develop into the greatest gold stampede that the American continent has seen since the days of the Yukon. Hundreds of hardy prospectors, company engineers, and mining officials have braved the hazards of a long winter trail and are camping in the snow at the scene of the latest strike and their number is growing day by day as the sourdoughs arrive here from all parts of the continent and set forth with their dog teams for the new land of golden promise.

Up to within a few days ago a long "mush" behind a toboggan or sled drawn by a team of dogs, or a still more venturesome trek over the trail without the dogs, was the only means of reaching the Red Lake region, some 150 miles north of this point. But an airplane service has just been inaugurated and the journey, which at the best took six days over the trail, is being made in less than two hours.

Demand for Huskies

The dog has had his day in the Red Lake gold rush. So great was the demand for huskies that some of them were selling at $200, and dogs of practically every description were pressed into service. Thousands of animals were brought in from other northern points and it is said that there is not a good huskie left in the north country as far west as Winnipeg. Now those who can afford it travel in comparative safety and comfort, but many others who have but a small stake continue mushing over the trail, or will wait here until the water routes open up in the spring. Others, unable to secure dogs, have set out on the trail hauling their supplies on a toboggan.

Hudson, civilization's last outpost in this section of the North country, is the natural jumping-off place for the adventurers who are seeking fortune in this latest Eldorado. It is on the northern transcontinental line of the Canadian National Railway some 240 miles east of Winnipeg and 12 miles to the west of Sioux Lookout. Before the reports of Red Lake gold were broadcast, it was little more than a name on the map of the great railway system which crosses Canada from Atlantic to Pacific. It consisted of a Hudson's Bay Company fur trading post, a residence for the post officials, a section house, and a couple of shanties. In winter it was almost completely isolated. No train stopped here and the only visitors were Indians and trappers bringing in their furs. Now it is a picturesque and busy town. Practically every passenger train both east and west is carrying passengers for Hudson, and day by day the rush is increasing. It has assumed such proportions that the Canadian government has taken steps to assist the prospectors. The Department of Mines has just established a recording office at Red Lake so that claims may be legally registered on the spot. The management of the Canadian National Railways is also facilitating the development movement by catering to the needs of those who are going to the new camp.

Red Lake Trail

From the back yard of Hudson's most pretentious hotel—a flimsy two-story wooden structure containing an astonishing number of beds—a ribbon of wall-trodden snow, about eighteen inches wide, stretches out to the north. This is the Red Lake trail. From Hudson the route is over Lac Seul, a wind-swept stretch of frozen lake which has taken the heart out of many an inexperienced musher before he was well started on his journey. For about fifty miles of the remainder of the distance the trail runs through forest; the balance is over frozen lakes and rivers. For the most part this section of the trail follows the shore as nearly as possible in order to escape the blizzards which are apt to blow over the wide open stretches at any time of the day or night.

Under ordinary conditions the trip to Red Lake is made in from ten to twelve days. It has been done in six days when conditions were extraordinarily favorable and the toboggan load was light.

Every morning from ten to twenty outfits assemble at the back of the hotel and hit the narrow trail to the north. The average equipment is four dog teams to six men. Each team draws a toboggan upon which is loaded the prospectors' food, the food for the dogs, clothing, tents, and all other supplies.

Sometimes the mushers make twenty miles a day, and sometimes they make five. It depends upon conditions of trail and weather. They camp where night over takes them. Making camp is a serious matter, at least for the tenderfoot who is not accustomed to the rigors of the northern winter. It is frequently 20 or 30 degrees below zero, with a blizzard blowing. The mushers always try to make camp where there are trees to provide a certain amount of shelter from the wind. They clear away a patch of snow large enough for the camp and then pitch their tents. Then they cut spruce or balsam boughs and place them over the bottom of the tent area and put up their stove, a sheet iron affair which folds into a small space when not in use. Then the meal is cooked and the dogs led after. Each dog is taken out of harness and fastened to a tree, with a tight collar around his neck to keep him from escaping. A little brush is cut for each dog to lie down on, and he is then given his food—frozen fish and corn-meal mash.

Hardy Dogs Used

The dogs are more hardy than the men. The latter, curled up in a fur-lined sleeping bag upon a bed of boughs inside the tent, do not fare so badly under ordinary conditions. The dogs lie out in the open. It may snow in the night, but that does not make any difference. Sometimes in the morning the dogs are all buried under six inches of snow, but it never seems to trouble them.

Prospectors who have staked out claims and have returned here report that there is but little more comfort or convenience to be found at Red Lake than they experienced along the trail leading to it. For the district is so wild and remote from the ordinary routes of man that it has not yet been properly surveyed and the only habitation in the whole district is a fur trading post. Tents are being pitched all over the snowbound north and many of the prospectors live a life of extreme hardship and hazard while carrying on their work. The majority of the men going in now are staking out individual claims, though half a dozen big mining companies have bought up rights in large territories and their engineers are at work, or are here waiting for the breaking up of the ice in the spring. The spring rush to Red Lake is expected to assume enormous proportions. Not only will many hundreds who are waiting here set out by this water route as soon as the ice goes out, but with waterways leading to the Red Lake district from many other points on the Canadian National being used as a means of entering the region, the trek to Red Lake may well assume the proportions of another Klondike rush.

R. J. Funkhouser, Well Known Here, Forms Body to "Clean Up" Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., March 30.—Plans to fight the alleged era of lawlessness in Hagerstown and Washington county in a political way were laid Monday night by fourteen men who met in the office of R. J. Funkhouser, Hagerstown business man, well known in Gettysburg, and former member of the state legislature, who has been active for a number of years in reform movements in this locality. R. J. Funkhouser is a brother of Roy P. Funkhouser, who resides in Gettysburg.

The group, which met in executive session, is acting as an informal steering committee for a new organization now in formation whose purpose will be "to assist officers in combating the crime situation and enforcing law."

Names Kept Secret
The names of the members of the committee were not divulged, the explanation being that they were acting purely in an informal way until actual organization takes place. Aimed primarily at enforcement of the prohibition law, the organization also is expected to demand more rigid adherence to all other laws, it being charged in general terms that county and municipal officials here have shown no inclination to enforce laws already on the statute books.

After the meeting Mr. Funkhouser explained that the platform adopted would be submitted to one hundred representative citizens for their signatures. At least that many persons already have signed their willingness to sign such a document, he said, and to obtain their signatures will be a mere physical task of seeing them.

Plan Mass Meeting
When the one hundred have signed the paper the plan is to call a meeting at which formal organization will take place. Such a meeting is expected to take place in about a week. The next move will be to bring the matter before the general public at a mass meeting to be held in Hagerstown. At that time funds will be sought to carry out the program of the organization. The platform indorsed by the committee and prepared for circulation among the one hundred was as follows:

"We citizens of Washington county in view of present efforts intended to discredit and nullify laws enacted by both state and federal governments do solemnly subscribe to and declare the following principles to be essential to the stability of our state and federal government and to the security of life, liberty and the common welfare of all loyal citizens.

Denounce Enemies
"Article 1—We subscribe to and defend the Constitution of the United States of America and the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and we denounce as enemies of our country and state all those who would nullify the provisions of the same, but grant the right of any citizen or citizens to advocate amendments thereto by the orderly method prescribed therein.

"Article 2—We believe the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States was and is the expressed will of the majority of the citizens thereof, and that the Federal Congress and the Legislature of the State of Maryland should, respectively, enact such laws as are necessary for the enforcement of this amendment.

"Article 3—We believe that only such persons as hold the aforesaid principles as essential to the proper administration of the laws can truthfully and without equivocation or mental reservation subscribe to and keep and perform the oath of office required of legislative, judicial and administrative officers.

"Therefore—We hereby pledge our support to the nomination and election of only such candidates for legislative, judicial and executive offices who freely and unequivocally subscribe to these principles."

HORSE, MULE STILL DEMANDED

General Belief That Horseless Carriage Supplants "Old Dobbin" Is Meeting Opposition in West.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Any general belief that the horseless vehicle and the horseless plow have supplanted "old Dobbin" and his cousin, the mule, would not find support at the world's largest horse and mule market here.

The demand for saddle horses is as great as it has been at any time in the last fifty years. Stockmen assert there also is an increasing demand for commercial horses and farm mules. Furthermore, prices of mules and certain types of horses are advancing and there is an actual shortage on the market.

The value of business transacted last year "in the ring" at the East St. Louis barns was estimated at $9,000,000, representing 65,432 head of horses and mules. This was an increase of 1,324 head over 1924. The outlook this year is for greater trading.

Farm mules are still being used in preference to tractors throughout the South and in many northern and western states, dealers say. The increased demand for commercial horses is attributed to large business concerns in cities having discovered that use of horses for short hauls is more economical than trucks.

The principal displacement of horses has been by passenger automobiles. "We will freely admit there is no hope for revival of the demand for the coach or driving horse because horses for fast traffic cannot compete with the automobile," said J. J. Searey, president of the St. Louis Horse and Mule Commission Company. "But the heavy draft horse will always hold its place in the economic life of the city."

The shortage in the stockyard barns is ascribed to decreased production which has brought about increased demand. Increased foreign demand also has contributed to the shortage.

Mules, which is recent years have monopolized eighty-five to ninety per cent of the market sales, are more available than horses, but government figures show that while the number of mules in the United States increased 5.5 per cent from 1920 to 1925, the number under two years old decreased during that same period 44.5 per cent.

Missouri still tops the list of mule producing states, with Iowa and Nebraska second and third. West Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas afford large markets for the sale of mules, chiefly because of coal mining and cotton growing. Illinois in 1925, however, bought more mules from the East St. Louis yards than any other state in the union.

Political Situation in Lackawanna Warms As Primary Day Approaches

Scranton, March 30.—With all signs pointing to no opposition to Congressman Watres and Senator Davis for re-nomination on the Republican ticket, interest in the primary election in Lackawanna county will center entirely around the tricorned fight in progress for the Republican senatorial nomination. For a time it appeared that Senator Davis would be opposed by Burgess John A. Powell, of Taylor, but latest indications are that Powell will not file his petitions.

It is the senatorial fight, however, that will provide the big show. Virtually all of the organization leaders have pledged their support to Senator Pepper and are bending every effort to send him out of Lackawanna county with a comfortable lead. Such recognized leaders as Mayor Jermyn, former Lieutenant Governor Watres, father of the county's congressman; Sheriff Schlager, District Attorney Seragg, County Chairman Appgar, County Treasurer Davis, County Commissioners Thomas and Von Bergen, Recorder of Deeds Haas, Register of Wills Madden and former District Attorney Lewis are among the foremost supporters of Senator Pepper.

One of the significant features of the present campaign is the position of those who directed the Pinchot campaign here in 1922. Almost all of them have declared publicly their intention of supporting Senator Pepper. About the lone exception is Miss Hazel Davies, who owes her job as Registration Commissioner to Governor Pinchot. Another exception is Judge Watson, who was appointed to the bench by the governor several weeks ago.

Joseph G. Jeffries, who was Pinchot's county chairman in 1922, now is one of Senator Pepper's staunchest supporters, and the same is true of Mrs. Worthington Scranton, a member of the State Committee from Lackawanna county. Dr. D. Webster Evans, a progressive since the Bull Moose movement in 1912 and who campaigned extensively for Pinchot four years ago, is out working actively in behalf of Senator Pepper. All signs indicate that the Pinchot crowd will find itself in a far different position than it did in 1922.

Just who will take up the fight for Congressman Vane has not been disclosed. Harry Mackey, his campaign chairman, is expected here soon to look over the situation and make plans for the campaign. Mackey is well known in Scranton and, according to reports from Philadelphia, he has high hopes of getting a formidable organization in the field for Vane. Political leaders, however, believe his visit will be futile.

A Vane scout was in the city over the week-end, and a check showed that he passed most of his time in company with active Democrats. As a matter of fact, it is the wet Democrats who are doing most of the shouting. They have put out stories that hundreds of Democrats will change their registration April 14 so that they may have a chance to cast their vote for the wet South Philadelphia boss.

HEALTH TALK

The health talk of the Pennsylvania Department of Health is prepared this week by H. F. Bronson, Chief, Section of Housing, Bureau of Engineering. Mr. Bronson says:—

"Spring housecleaning time is here again. Not a few housekeepers are of the opinion that the job is well done by attending to the freshening up inside the home. But from a community standpoint the work has not begun. As a matter of fact, even from the standpoint of the individual, it is scarcely fifty per cent concluded. Clean homes within are essential, but clean homes outside are also quite necessary. Screening your doors may keep flies and mosquitoes out generally but exposed garbage and the winter's accumulation of riff-raff is a most eloquent invitation for summer pests covered with disease germs to visit you by quietly slipping into your home when the doors or windows are carelessly left open. Plenty of soap and water inside the house, of course, but little muscle work in the form of a rake and back-bending to remove unpleasant and unsightly things from the yard is the only way to follow through on a housecleaning campaign.

"Here are a few rules which will greatly assist in not only making living surroundings safe and healthy but will add to the attractiveness of the particular neighborhood in which you live.

"Do not use uncovered, leaking garbage pails.

"Every week collect all rubbish and refuse and reduce to ashes.

"Tin cans, broken glass should be used for filling low places or be buried.

"Ditches on any vacant lots which you control or own should be cleared of weeds and culverts opened to permit free drainage.

"Roofs, gutters and cisterns should be cleaned and inspected for repairs. Use plenty of paint, varnish and whitewash.

"Pride in your home which includes your front yard and your back one as well should prompt every person to clean up. Loyalty to your community suggests no other course. Safety for yourself and your family makes it imperative.

"Your town can be the cleanest town in the state of Pennsylvania, which will mean that it can be one of the most attractive. But it needs your individual assistance. Get your brush and get busy. Spring is here!"

PARDON BOARD IS SOB BUREAU

Harrisburg.—The chief "sob" department in the state government is the board of pardons. No other department on Capitol Hill receives so many tearful, heartrending letters. They come not alone from applicants for clemency at the hands of the board but from relatives, friends and even the general public. References to "dear mother" permeate many of the letters. The board also is the recipient of many petitions in behalf of applicants. However, while all letters and petitions receive consideration, the cases are decided on their merits and facts presented in the applicants' petitions and by their counsel.

Dr. A. R. Wentz Hit By "Hammer"

Rev. Dr. A. R. Wentz, member of the faculty of the Lutheran Theological Seminary, is the latest "victim" of "The Velvet Hammer," of a Harrisburg evening newspaper. Doctor Wentz's writup, in verse, follows:

"The history of churches is a thing of weight and place, for pastors more than emperors have led the human race, and what men do down here on earth they greatly modify to fit careers in other spheres beyond the placid sky. The history of Lutherans is said with sap and sense in five true volumes from the pen of Doctor Abdel Wentz.

"In Gettysburg (the college) human history at large was seven years committed to his keen and careful charge, and in the seminary now, ten years or more to date, he's taught church history to lads for whom the pulpits wait, instructing them in vital facts, inspiring them with zeal and building up the firm beliefs all proper preachers feel.

"He's on the church's board of works for all the U. S. A.; was often synod delegate with much to do and say—was in the world convention held in 1923. You'll see that he's a busy man whose time is seldom free; but still he plays two hours some days at tennis for a rest, which proves that he's a person with tabasco pepper blast."

Glimpses Into Foreign Lands

Berlin.—Ferdinand, the venerable white-haired, white-bearded former Czar of Bulgaria, has been given the unofficial title of dean of Coburg's colony of royal European refugees. At 65 he is known as the man without regrets. He is one of the few in this beautiful Bavarian exile center who harbor no aspirations for a return to the throne.

Almost forgotten by the world in which he played so important a part during the World War, Ferdinand is enjoying life to the full, while about him the Grand Duke Cyril and his coterie are organizing for a return to Russia and dethroned German princes are directing suits for the recovery of millions of dollars against state and federal governments.

A keen observer of diplomacy, he said recently that, while Coburg seems to be seething with intrigue, he himself looks on and smiles. His palatial residence is filled with books. Scores of rare species of song birds flit among the gorgeous flowers of his solarium. He journeys to Munich frequently for the opera. This summer he again intends to visit Frau Sosima Wagner, widow of the composer, at Bayreuth during the Wagnerian festival.

It takes more than winning $25,000 on a $3 lottery ticket to upset a staid Berliner. A man who described himself as a shopkeeper who had been thrown into bankruptcy the day before the recent drawings walked into the lottery office and displayed a ticket.

He calmly puffed on the remnant of a cigar while an official counted out his winnings, 100,000 marks. The man pocketed the bills and walked out. Two minutes later he returned.

"I think I forgot my cigar," he said. A clerk pointed to a stub lying on the counter. The man grabbed it and walked out again without a word.

In contrast, eight waiters in a Nuremberg restaurant, each holding an eighth of a ticket, won the second grand prize of 400,000 marks. They hurried to the lottery office, leaving the proprietor to wait on customers. "The drinks are on the house," they yelled on their return. The proprietor served the drinks. The waiters then returned to their jobs.

Frau Greiser, 78 years old, one of Berlin's most popular flower "girls," will celebrate on April 1 her fiftieth anniversary as a street vendor of flowers.

Today she is bent and infirm, but always smiling. She has presided over the same corner flower stand at the Belle Alliance Platz for the last half century, and is known by name to thousands who pass her stand daily.

She has several sons and grandsons, but all are so poor that she feels it her duty to earn her own living. Having been informed that a rushing business awaits her on the anniversary day, Frau Greiser has abandoned the idea of taking the day off and will be at the stand as usual.

Holding that music stimulates the consumption of alcohol, a Berlin court has approved the police department's order closing restaurants, cafes and saloons in which there is music one hour earlier than those in which the burgher sips his liquor in quiet.

Even an electric piano, the court said, excites persons to drink more than is good for them.

Paris.—Aristide Briand is again in the political saddle as the Premier of France for the last time, having recovered from what he described as the "hardest jolt" of his political career, which came when the deputies defeated his eighth cabinet after a historic all night financial debate.

"They guillotined me at dawn without the comfort of the traditional coffee, rum and cigarette," was M. Briand's comment on that setback.

M. Briand's immediate return to the helm of the ship of state surprised many students of politics, for he has the reputation of France's most perspicacious statesmen and on several previous occasions had stepped out of office and remained out after setbacks not nearly so severe as this one, so as not to jeopardize his chances of an eventual return.

He resigned once when he had a majority of 28 in the chamber, a margin that today would be considered comparatively safe, and on another occasion he resigned without giving the chamber a chance to vote. This time, he commented he "clung to power for the first time" in his life and got his "heaviest fall."

Late summer visitors to France may have the opportunity to see a completed church dedicated to St. Joan of Arc, which, having been under construction for 45 years, is now nearing completion at Domremy, the birthplace of the saint.

Work on this basilica was begun in 1881, but progress was slow. In 1909, the year of the beatification of Joan of Arc, construction had not advanced beyond the point reached in 1900, the nave and spire being all that was finished. Building was resumed in 1920 and now is nearly completed, a choir with an apse and a transept having been joined to the nave by a dome surmounted by a statue of St. Michael.

It is planned to consecrate the basilica in August, when Monsignor Foucault, will celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of his ordination. However, the appeal for subscriptions which had been made through France has not been liberally answered, and it is doubtful whether there will be enough money to put in the mosaics planned for the apse and dome. At present it is impossible to hold services in the church, for there are no choir boys and singers. It is planned to have an orphanage with accommodations for twenty children attached for the service of the basilica.

"I am often ashamed," the superior in charge of the basilica wrote recently, "when foreigners, who come here in numbers during the summer, see the state of our undertaking. It seems to me that their astonishment, which they often can not control, is a reproach to our national dignity."

A Famous Man

The originator of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the blood, as well as the "Favorite Prescription" for women, was Dr. Ray V. Pierce, a practicing physician in Western Pennsylvania. He early moved to Buffalo, N. Y., and established The Invalids' Hotel, then he put up his home remedies in the World's Dispensary, where they were carefully prepared from roots, barks and herbs, and placed them with druggists all over the United States.

Dr. Pierce's Discovery, for the blood, has been sold in larger quantities by druggists all over the United States than any other medicine. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a tonic in its effect on the stomach and digestive apparatus; an alternative in its actions on the blood, liver and skin. It increases the appetite, stimulates the digestion, enriches the blood, clears the skin of eruptions and blemishes, and makes both men and women feel as they did when they were young and care free.

Ask your nearest druggist for Doctor Pierce's family medicines, in tablets or liquid or send 10 cents for a trial package of any of Dr. Pierce's Medicines in tablet form, to Doctor Pierce's Clinic, in Buffalo, N. Y.—adv.
